VEURROFF GALLERIES. The water color exhibition at Veerhoff's galleries by noted New York water color artists will be inaugurated at 7 o'clock this evening.
Visitors will find the center gallery filled with the very choicest examples of the American water volor school.
Notable among them is a "Setting Sun in Winter" by Julian Rix, which is decidedly unique in style. Several other beautiful subects by Rix are on view. Percy Moran is represented by two charming figure pieces in the high key that makes the French water color so Tamous. One of them—"The Alternoon less is the original of one of the newest and finest etchings recently published. Kreuseman van Elten, Hamilton Hamilton and J. C. Nicoll are each represented by several of those beautiful refined land and sea scapes so characteristic of ness. Mr. Anbrey Boucicault has evidently inherited his father's talent, though in a different line, for his Young Marlowe was an artistic piece of work. Miss Amy Busby was effective as Miss Neville and the remainder of the cast course, the central figure in the play, and the careful study that he had bestowed upon the part was manifest in his excellent work throughout. His art has become mellowed and rounded by time and one who saw his complete and finished performance last night could hardly recognize the man who first claimed recognition in the burlesque of "Blackeyed Susan," and who sang "Capt. Crosstree is My Name." Mr. Robson, in the revival of Goldsmith's comedy, is not P. de Longpre, the great flower painter, has four examples—roses, peonics and pausies. He is one of the few artists who have been medaled for flower painting.

Alice Hirschberg has three figure pieces in this exhibition, and so one might go on and mention dozens of these paintings and still give a poor description, as there is nothing like in the revival of Goldsmith's comedy, is not only adding to his fame as an actor, but is do-ing a good work for the stage and the younger generations in presenting a picture of former times historically correct as to costume and manners and handsomely framed as to stage The galleries will be open after 7 o'clock this vening, and the exhibition will continue for about ten days.

He has been seen here in that character before, but last night his work seemed to have gained an unction and finish that it formerly lacked. The play belongs to the class of old English comedies that are too rarely seen now, and it requires people of superior merit to properly interpret the several characters. In collecting his company Mr. Robson has been peculiarly fortunate, for all seem to be especially adapted to the roles for which they have been cast. Mrs. Robson makes a charming Miss Hardcastle, giving to the part all the vivacity that it demands, and yet never One of the largest Masonic banquets given in late years in this city took place last evening in the armory of the Washington Light Infantry. Over 600 sat down to the handsomely decorated tables as the guests of Lafayette R. A Chapter No. 5. The banquet was given in honor of the officers of the grand chapter, and like everything that is undertaken by this vigorous and lively organization, all the details were in perfect keeping. WHITE'S TREATMENT.

Academy of Music.—There was a big crowd of people at the Academy of Music last night, when Pitou and Jessop's six-act American drams, "The Power of the Press," was produced. Mr. J. E. Wilson, as Steven Carson, albeit stagy, was a hero right along, and Miss Waterman as his wife won genuine praise for her work. Miss Lavinia Shannon as Julia Segment Production of the Press of the Pr What is Said by Dr. McWilliams and Jail mour, the Prima Donna, dressed the part handsomely, looked it prettily and played it artistic ally. Mr. Edwin, Mr. Riegel, Mr. Pattee, Mr. Kidder and Mr. Mason met their requirements well and Mr. Martin and Miss Suckett, as Mr. Officials.

In reference to the treatment of White. Alex. McWilliams, physician to the jail, has made an affidavit. He says that during the time White has been in jail he has given orders that he (W.) should have an extra quantity and quality of food, and believes that he received it with the exception of three meals, on the 2d and 3d instants; that on the 2d the deputy warden asked whether there was any reason why White should not be required to bathe as usual, and he replied that there was not and he should be required to do so. Since White has been in fail his health has been in perfectly good conjail his health has been in perfectly good condition, and he has required and received no medical treatment at affiant's hands, and he appears well and strong, with no indications of feebleness or weakness from any cause. Dr. McWilliams further says that the character of the food is good in quality and quantity and he inspects it daily, and it is of the best quality and is well cooked and properly served. He says the bath tubs are of porcelain and iron, and he requires them to be scoured out with soap and sand after using, and he inspects them himself.

James Woodward, an officer, makes affidavit as to the requirement to bathe; that the facilities are good and decent, the tubs clean, supplied with hot and cold water and towels. As to the occasion of Wednesday, he says White was requested to bathe as usual and he objected, saying that he had taken a bath in his cell on Saturday night previous; that he had informed White on two or three different occasions that is in the cast and his new venture has proved a success. The famous Patrice as Zetta is a soubrette of considerable ability and captivated the audience. Again tonight.

Unlike most of the after-pieces, the one-act skit which closed the performance possessed considerable merit. IT WAS A SUCCESS. Dr. Ward's Verdict on Yesterday's Executi

At 12:20 o'clock yesterday afternoon the autopsy on Loppy, the executed criminal, was begun by Dr. Carlos F. McDonald, assisted by Dr. Samuel B. Ward of Albany and Dr. Van eissen of Brooklyn. The body was found in well-nourished condition and capable of proving a good test against the dynamo. The organs were found in a slightly congested conlition, and there were several indications of an extra amount of spleen. The brain showed almost complete paralysis by the electric current. Where the electrodes were put on the tissue was slightly burned, but no very great disfigurement resulted. The face and neck

A few reporters only, the rear guard of the army of scribes which had beleaguered the prison for two days, were still standing in front of the warden's office in the middle of the road, being kept at a distance from the building by the armed guard, when a truck, drawn by a brown horse and with a driver clad in the stringed prison garb, drove up from the north the little of the prison garb, drove up from the north the string of th striped prison garb, drove up from the north side of the prison, took the winding road toward the cemetery of the prison. In the cemetery near the open grave four convicts, under the charge of a keeper, awaited the arrival of the cofin. In less than two minutes it was taken from the truck and lowered into the grave. The wet earth was hastily shoveled in, the truck drove off, the four converted transport t vict grave diggers were marched back to the prison and the history of a criminal was ended. Near the shanty a three-by-three-foot wooden shanty has been erected, in which an armed guard will be stationed for eight days to watch and see that no one attemps to exhume the body. It is supposed that after the lapse of eight days the body will be entirely consumed by the quicklime thrown into the coffin, and the guard will then be withdrawn.

Dr. Ward of Albany, who was one of the witnesses, was seen by a reporter. He said: "I, as well as the other witnesses, am pledged to hanging. I do not see any reason why re-porters should be excluded from the death chamber during the execution. I believe that one of the earliest acts of the next legislature will be to amend that portion of the law which excludes newspaper men."

disfigurement resulted. The face and neck were slightly bilstered by the salt water acting as a conductor of the lost current. That death was instantaneous was evident in the brain and beart. Rigor mortis was very strongly developed and the teeth were set over the tongue. Almost the same conditions were observable as those developed in the other executions. There was no charring of the flesh or burning of the internal organs.

It is probable that Loppy was killed just as the whistles of the neighboring factories blew for the dinner hour, when the engines were used entirely for the dynamo. This was one of the main reasons why the noon hour was selected by Warden Brown to carry out the execution, as sufficient voltage could not be obtained from the dynamo with the machinery running in the workshops. Those witnesses who could be conversed with as they came from the prison stated that Warden Brown had sworn them on their oath not to reveal anything. Electrician Davis, who touched the button which turned on the current, said he marely performed his work and could not tell the voltage used to kill Loppy.

Chaplain Edgerton was visibly affected when he came out. His face was as white as a sheet and he seemed to be completely unnerved. As he made his way to his house opposite the warden's office, he was asked several questions, but the firmly refused to talk and seemed to be glad to escape from the ghastly seene which he had just witnessed. He came out of the prison immediately after the execution. At 1 o'clock the convicts resumed work in the shops just the same as though nothing unnasual had occurred. At 3 o'clock Drs. J. B.
